

Title: The Curious Cloud

Once upon a time, high above the azure skies, floated a small cloud named Cirra. Cirra was not like other clouds – while they drifted lazily, she was curious about the world below. Every day, she watched humans build cities, grow forests, and sail across the oceans.

One day, Cirra saw a child looking up and waving. She waved back with a puff of rain. The child laughed, and Cirra realized that even clouds could make someone happy. From that day onward, she decided that her purpose was to bring gentle rain to those in need – to farmers waiting for crops to grow and to rivers longing to flow again.

And thus, Cirra became the kindest cloud in the sky, drifting wherever kindness was needed most.